When you have decided to purchase a used SUV, you have already taken a decision. You're not going for a new one. You can easily pick up a vehicle of your choice from the used SUVs and Vans for sale. However, purchasing a used car could be tricky, and you shouldn't rush into your decision.

You need to consider various options like whether to buy from a certified pre-owned dealership, non-certified dealership, private owner, imported or domestic, price. You will also need to consider the age of the car, warranty, and many more things.

When you are looking for used SUV cars in Georgia or used trucks in Savannah or used vans, you need to go through some homework of many complicated processes, investing a lot of time and effort.

Here are some points you can consider to help you in taking an informed decision before finalizing a deal.

1. Purchasing a certified pre-owned (CPO) Vehicle - is a prudent way of getting a used car in best condition. CPO vehicles go through rigorous inspections, are reconditioned with factory parts, and come with an extended warranty.

Downside - CPO vehicles are the most expensive used-car options. Be ready to pay an added premium. A point to note here is that independent dealers (not brand specific) will not be able to give you a CPO vehicle as they sell other brands as well under one roof.

However, these vehicles do undergo a reasonable inspection with issues fixed before they are up for sale.

The best alternative could be to buy a private-party vehicle that is still under warranty.

2. Buying from a Dealer or a private-party - each has its strengths and weaknesses. An independent dealer has a variety of SUVs and vans for sale after having undergone a fair examination. There could be financing opportunities available too if you wish to opt for one.

With a private party, you get the vehicle as-is (unless under warranty). Of course, you can get your expert mechanic to inspect, and scrutinize all servicing /repairing history from the party (advisable) if available.

Negotiating with a private owner could be easier, and you can get the best price (a dealership-vehicle may cost 12% or so, more). There are various online sites where you can buy private-owned vehicles. Tell n could be one for example.

3. Independent or Authorized dealers - will depend on your choice. If you have a brand fixed in mind, an authorized dealer could be a better choice along with the CPO option. Independent dealers will have a variety of models/brands in their fleet with various price ranges to choose from.

4. Test Drive - must not be skipped (many buyers do). A test drive helps in understanding the condition of the vehicle, whether it is suitable for your needs, meets your expectation and offers you a comfortable travelling experience.

5. Safety - most of the modern cars come with a variety of advanced safety features which many buyers are not aware of. Do your research comparing various brands, the safety provisions and their benefits. Electronic stability control, anti-lock brake system, head protection airbags are some crucial features worth spending money on.
